

THE TOLL HOUSE GOES TO MIAMI

The Toll House in Whitman, owned and operated by Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Wakefield of Pill Hill, Duxbury, went to Miami on Jan. 5 when the Bayview Room of the Dupont Plaza Hotel in Miami, Fla., presented a Toll House cuisine.

A special menu had on its cover:

"The popularity of this charming New England restaurant may well be due to the philosophy of its owners, the Wakefields: 'Small quantity cooking, we believe, gives the best results in flavor and appearance, and we are convinced that there are no substitutes for butter, cream, eggs, fresh fruits and fresh vegetables in preparing a fine meal.' The original Toll House (home of those famous chocolate chip cookies) was built in 1709. Halfway between Boston and New Bedford, it was an ideal place for stagecoach passengers to eat, while toll was paid and horses were changed. Tonight -- welcome to fine eating, MODERN Toll House style!

BIG HIT

It was reported later by the hotel that unsolicited comments on the food ranged from "sensational" to "fabulous" to simply "damned good."

Menu features included baked chicken, baked pork chops and Sweetbreads Chantilly -- "All these dishes deliciously, authentically TOLL HOUSE!"

Each evening of the week the Bayview Room presents a different menu featuring priceless recipes of America's most distinguished dining places, including the Pump Room of Chicago, The Greenbrier of White Silver Springs, along with the Toll House of Whitman.

Psst! For reservations, call Frank at the Dupont Plaza.